As Girls

we like things served daintily and appetizingly.

When Spring comes our appetites are fickle. We want daintier dishes. We want them zestful and easy to digest.

We Eat Salads

because they are tempting—because they give just the right attractiveness to the luncheon and dinner.

The Cafeteria has specialized in making salads. In fact its present success has been due partly to the variety of salads served.

Fruit salads of numerous kinds, gelatine salads, fruit and cheese salads, chicken salad, salmon salads are some of the favorites.

Have you a favorite spring-time salad? Tell us about it and we will try to make it for you.

DAIRYING ATTRACTS THESE TWO GIRLS

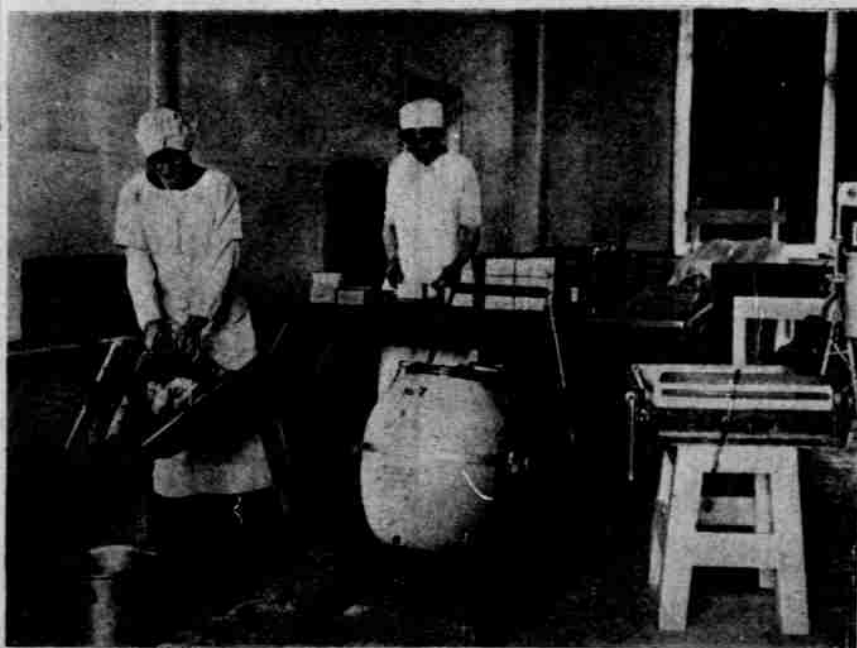

Miss Smith and Miss Pleas Will Show Their Fathers Up-to-Date Methods.

"IDEAL FOR WOMEN"

Both Will Be Real Farmers—One Eligible for Judging Team.

Miss Helen Smith of Lawson, Mo., and Miss Iris Pleas of Collinsville, Okla., are the only girls in the College of Agriculture who are doing special work in dairying. Miss Smith is a junior and Miss Pleas a sophomore.

"I have often wondered why more girls don't study dairying," said Miss Smith. "To me it seems ideal work for a woman who is interested in agriculture. Certainly there is no business that gives greater return for every minute of careful attention. I suppose a great many girls at first thought imagine dairying is decidedly a man's job. Of course they are considering the heavy work involved. In running a dairy one must have a great deal of help and all heavy work can be done by one's assistants. It is the supervision of the dairy that decides its success. From her general experience I think a woman is naturally better fitted to oversee the production of food than is a man. The average woman pays more attention to details.

"My ideal farm would consist of two or three hundred acres, with dairying as a main business and poultry as a sideline. I should want only purebred stock, for in the dairy business especially I do not think it pays to work with inferior animals."

Miss Smith will live on her father's 560-acre farm at Lawson, after leaving school.

To Improve Her Father's Farm.

"Little or no attention has been given to dairy cattle on my father's farm," said Miss Smith, "as his greatest interest has been in horses. I want to see at least part of the farm turned into a dairy, as it is an ideal place for such work. Lawson is on the main line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, about 40 miles from Kansas City, making the marketing problem a simple one."

Miss Smith finds the course in judging dairy cattle intensely interesting. She is eligible for the dairy judging team next fall.

Miss Pleas had no thought of doing special work in dairying when she entered the College of Agriculture. "I took the general course in dairying because it was required," she said, "but I found it so interesting that I followed it up with other courses. I like the work in dairy manufacture, and cheese-making is especially interesting."

Good Chance for Business Woman.

"When one considers the importance of dairy products among food-stuffs, it is easy to see the financial outcome in the manufacture of high-class goods, and a woman with a business head ought to make a big success of this kind of work."

"A knowledge of dairying is not only valuable as a business in itself, but it enables the housekeeper to recognize quality in this important food, and if she is a town woman, who must buy such material, she can make intelligent demands upon those from whom she buys."

"My father is going to buy a farm as soon as I am through school. He is a physician and of course has little time to study farming, so he sent me here to learn something of scientific agriculture. I think I shall at least be able to tell him a few things about dairying."

HAMPERING AN INSTITUTION.

When appropriation matters were being considered some time ago by the General Assembly The St. Louis Times advocated a policy of economy in the setting aside of funds for each and every purpose, and, in connection with this policy, we took the position that the increased appropriations sought by the University of Missouri, for several items, which might easily be laid over to a more opportune time, should be denied. But it is one thing to limit the total appropriation for the State University and another thing to hamper the management of the institution in its work by making laws governing the expenditure of the money, once it is set aside.

For this reason we believe House bill No. 155 and Senate bill No. 24, now pending before the Legislature, should be killed. These bills provide that no money shall be paid out for any State institution except upon warrant issued by the State Auditor. Not only would the bill be cumbersome in its operation and productive of much annoyance, but it would, in large part, withdraw the effective management of the institutions concerned from Boards of Control in charge of them and vest such power in the State Auditor himself. The bill not only requires the Auditor to issue all warrants, but requires that before they are issued all bills and accounts must be audited and approved by him. The Auditor would be able to hold up a bill, even though the purchase had been completed; the Auditor would be in a position to wield a club over all the large institutions of the State, and his club might be used politically or otherwise; the duplication of work at the institution and in the Auditor's office would entail great expense and cause endless delay; discounts for prompt payment of bills might be lost in this delay; the Auditor's office now inspects the books and accounts of all institutions, and therefore has sufficient power over the records, and any attempt to place the Auditor over the Boards of Control would tend to lessen the dignity of the respective boards and bring about indifference in the management of the institutions. The bill should be killed—St. Louis Times.

GETS POLITICAL SCIENCE BOOK

Williams College Sends Library Volume on Chambers of Commerce.

H. O. Severance, University Librarian has received a book, "American Chambers of Commerce," from Williams College. This is the work of Kenneth Sturges and is the fourth essay published by the department of political science of Williams College.

This book is the first to deal comprehensively with the modern function and achievements of American chambers of commerce, boards of trade and commercial clubs.

Why Not Own Your Home;

If you have never owned a home it is partly your fault, because you have never made the effort. I can sell you a lot and help you to build a home at such prices and on such terms that you cannot afford to be a renter. I have helped more than a hundred people in Columbia in owning a home of their own. I can help you if you have any disposition whatever to try. My lots are very large and roomy, and you will be the exception if you are not pleased with your purchase. "Come, let us reason together."
